FIND TOOTH FROM SHARK AT LIME PITS IN BLAST

A shark's tooth more than twice as large as any heretofore known to scientists was unearthed last week from the lime pits of the D. M. S. & B. Co., near Lomita, where excavations which have held the attention of geologists for several weeks are still in progress.

The gnasher is five and three-fourths inches long, three inches thick at its heaviest end and is fully four inches wide at its base. Dr. L. E. Wyman of the Museum of History, Science and Art, after a careful examination of the tooth, declared that he felt that he was speaking conservatively when he said that it is far and away the largest shark's tooth recorded, and might even go as high as two and a half times as large as any with which he is acquainted.

The immensity and the fighting efficiency of the shark which carried such an aid to digestion can only be fully grasped when it is remembered that a shark has 200 teeth, arranged in four rows on each side of the jaw and gradually tapering to tiny, dagger-like teeth. A shark which has a tooth an inch and a half long is considered a monster, and one with a tooth two inches long can generally be counted upon to be fully twenty-five feet long. Furthermore, as these creatures increase in size their teeth do not increase proportionately to their bulk.

It is safe to conclude, therefore, that the fish which had such a tooth as that found was at least sixty feet long and must have ranked as a dreadnaught among the fighting things of the sea.

Incidentally, despite the passage of something like 1,000,000 years since he darted around to give battle, his immense tooth, beautifully petrified, is so perfectly preserved that it is as easy to classify and identify it as it would be to classify the tooth from a shark which had come to its death only yesterday.

Bench Making Bee

The primary department of the Lomita Sunday School is so crowded and so greatly in need of more and better seating capacity that it has been decided to hold a Bench Making Bee at the church next Tuesday, June 21. Carpenters and all men who are handy with tools are earnestly asked to come. Those who can come directly from their work will be provided with supper by the ladies at the church. Others who cannot come till after supper will also be given refreshments. It is hoped that the men will respond to this invitation and thus help the little folks to be more comfortable during the session of the Sunday School.

Pilgrims Knew the Bible

Three hundred years ago a little band of men and women lived on faith and hard work in the forests of Massachusetts. They are known now as Pilgrims because they sailed from England to find a place to worship God without restraint. They brought their pastor with them—few modern immigrants do.

Bible Develops Character

The Pilgrims were poor and unlearned, but they knew the Bible. That knowledge developed a type of character we all admire! These first settlers would not be known to posterity had they not been so well acquainted with their Bible. Is your Bible a parlor ornament, or a study book? Read it today around the family lamp. Read it every day.

ODD FELLOWS' MEMORIAL SERVICE

Last Sunday evening the Odd Fellows held their Memorial Service in the Lomita Church. Kind friends had decorated the church beautifully for the occasion. The music was under the direction of the choir leader, Mrs. Thomas Willacy, with Mrs. O. W. Thistle as organist. An augmented choir, in addition to leading the congregational singing, sang two special hymns—"Onward, Christian Soldiers" and "Hark, Hark, My Soul." The solos in the latter selection were sung with impressive effect by Mrs. E. W. Brumpton and Mr. J. G. Wilson. Mr. R. Jenkins was heard with much appreciation in the solo, "Father, Hear My Prayer."

Harbor City Lodge attended the service in a body and a large audience filled the church.

In the morning the pastor spoke on God's Fellow Workers. It was pointed out that team work was necessary in the church as well as without. We must work together if we would win. The promises of God assure us of success. No labor is in the vain in the Lord.

OFF FOR VANCOUVER, B. C.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Mathers of South Oak street left Tuesday morning on the first lap of a long automobile trip, which will eventually land them in Ymur, B. C., their former home. First they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Isaacs Buchanan of Spokane, Washington, for two weeks, thence down in the country to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hanna at Green Acre, Wash. From here they will head for Canada, driving leisurely along the scenic routes. Last year a similar trip was planned, but before they reached San Francisco they experienced the gas shortage that was felt all over the State at that time, and were forced to return home and abandon the trip. They will return some time in September.

Longer Produce Results Equal to the Demands of Transportation on Highways.

Road-building experts are endeavoring to impress the public with the fact that the old methods of building roads no longer produce results equal to the demands for highway transportation. If the highways are to be developed to their capacity there must be better and better highways.

Aid in Highway Research.

Engineering departments of leading colleges and universities in this country are aiding national bodies and actively co-operating in the work upon a national program of highway research.

Money for Good Roads.

It is announced in Washington that the various states have $222,000,000 for the building of roads—not, however, for the payment of exorbitant profits to unscrupulous contractors.
